

The Harvest Journey from Llanrhidian Farm to Llanrhidian Primary

It was a bright autumn morning at Llanrhidian Farm. The fields were golden with wheat, ready to harvest. Farmer Davies climbed into his big green tractor and called to his dog, Meg. “Come on, Meg! Time to bring in the crops!”

First, Farmer Davies used his combine harvester to cut the tall stalks of wheat. The shiny grains filled the trailer as the machine rumbled across the field.

Next, the wheat was taken to the mill, where the miller ground it into soft, white flour. “This will be perfect for Harvest bread,” said the miller proudly.

After that, the flour was sent to the village bakery. The bakers mixed the dough, baked warm loaves, and packed them into baskets ready for the school.

Meanwhile, at Llanrhidian Primary School, children were busy preparing for their Harvest Festival. They decorated the hall and brought in tins of food and fruit.

When Farmer Davies arrived with baskets of bread, the children cheered. The loaves were placed on the Harvest display.

Finally, everyone sang songs, read poems, and said thank you for the food. Farmer Davies smiled. “Harvest is about working hard, sharing, and being thankful,” he said.
